Présentation de l'éditeur

It has been quite a journey for Conor Harrington; from his work as a graffiti artist on the streets of Cork in the mid-1990s to holding the mantle of being the top-selling living Irish artist. When his 'Dance with the Devil' sold at auction in 2015 for GBP77,500, auctioneers Bonhams described Harrington's works as 'magisterial canvasses which unite the luxuriant, shadowy intensity of Caravaggio with the provocative roughness of the street'. This monograph-the first to chart his career in such depth-covers the nascent graffiti of his teenage years, the artistic awakening during his BA in Fine Art at Limerick School of Art and Design and his subsequent London-based career, with solo gallery shows in London and New York and his outdoor mural work internationally recognised. Alongside striking photography chronicling both his often large-scale gallery paintings and open air works across Ireland, the UK, the US, Norway, Spain, Poland, Brazil-and even along the Bethlehem Wall-sit fascinating documentary photographs of these artistic journeys paired with Harrington's personal commentary. Biographie de l'auteur

Conor Harrington was born in Cork, Ireland in 1980. In his mid-teens he painted his first wall on the streets of his hometown, and after completing a BA in Fine Art at Limerick School of Art and Design he relocated to London. Now equally synonymous with both large-scale studio compositions and outdoor murals, his provocative, dreamlike work draws a fascinating line between the street and the canvas.
